

AP[®] Comparative Government and Politics

Sample Student Responses and Scoring Commentary Set 1

Inside:

Free Response Question 6

AP® COMPARATIVE GOVERNMENT AND POLITICS 2019 SCORING GUIDELINES

Question 6

6 points

Part (a):

One point is earned for correctly describing a type of party system.

Acceptable descriptions include:

- In a single-party system, only one party is allowed to exist and hold power.
- In a dominant-party system, one party controls the government, although other parties exist.
- In a two-party or two-plus-party system, only two parties hold power.
- In a multiparty system, three or more parties are electorally competitive and/or hold power.

One point is earned for correctly explaining how that type of party system influences policy making.

Acceptable explanations may include:

- A single-party system
 - o produces a closed policy process that only reflects the views of the governing party
 - o produces a more efficient decision-making process
 - o creates policies intended to keep the party in power
- A dominant-party system
 - o produces a closed policy process that only reflects the views of the governing party
 - o produces a more efficient decision-making process
 - o creates policies intended to keep the party in power
- A two-party system
 - o integrates opposing viewpoints into the policy process that can lead to instability or gridlock
 - integrates opposing viewpoints into the policy process that can require negotiation and compromise
 - encourages centrist policies
- A multiparty system
 - o integrates multiple viewpoints into the policy process that can lead to instability or gridlock
 - integrates multiple viewpoints into the policy process that require negotiation and compromise
 - o gives voice to minority, ethnic, or regionalist parties in the policy process

Part (b):

One point is earned for correctly describing a type of party system.

See acceptable descriptions in Part (a).

One point is earned for correctly explaining how that type of party system influences policy making.

See acceptable explanations in Part (a).

AP® COMPARATIVE GOVERNMENT AND POLITICS 2019 SCORING GUIDELINES

Question 6 (continued)

Part (c):

One point is earned for correctly explaining how a party system is influenced by the type of electoral system.

Acceptable explanations include:

- In a proportional representation (PR) system, the percentage of votes roughly translates into the percentage of seats, allowing more parties or smaller parties to gain seats.
- In a PR system, the use of multimember districts allows more parties or smaller parties to gain seats.
- In a single-member district (SMD) system, only one party can win any given seat, preventing smaller, minor, or third parties from winning.
- An SMD system encourages strategic voting, favoring larger parties.

Part (d):

One point is earned for correctly explaining how regime change can lead to a change in the type of party system.

Acceptable explanations include:

- Countries that transition from authoritarian to democratic are more likely to hold free and fair elections that permit a change from a single-party to a two-party or multiparty system.
- Countries that transition from democratic to authoritarian are more likely to ban opposition parties or rig elections in favor of the governing party.
- Regime change may level the playing field and permit opposition parties to be electorally competitive.
- Countries change the constitution or the fundamental laws structuring the government in a way that transforms the party system.

A score of zero (0) is earned for an attempted or off-task answer that earns no points.

A score of (—) is earned for a blank.

- 6. There are different types of party systems around the world.

 (a) Describe one type of party system. Explain one way that type of party system influences policy making.

 (b) Describe another type of party system. Explain one way that type of party system influences policy making.

 (c) Explain how a country's party system is influenced by the type of electoral system in the country.

 - (d) Explain how regime change can lead to a change in the type of party system in a country.

Dotty to thomas which is dominant in the contry, such as Rassias United Ressia or Chinas CCP. This party system influences policy making by analing the passage of legislation much easier, live to a unified policy goal should be the party resulting in the government easily agreeing on legislation to pass. Chinas legislative branch, for instance, largely outs as a robber storm and featible for actions taken by chalman to Jinging. b) A multi-party system is characterized by neltiple parties comparing for power in the government. This estably as Its in B legislative gridlack duto disagreemes between parties. I be electoral system in a country will impact the number of parties able to participate of feering in government. While a proportional representation of system may allow for whatly parties to earn some representation, a first pass the post system, likelythe UK, resultain two parties dominating by to smaller parties being Greed into voting for larger ones, less they throw away the vote. d) A regime change visually means a change in idealogy drassically different to the original regime, meaning the past system can	a) A single party system is a system in which There is one sole United Ressia or Clina's CCP. This party system influences policy indexing by analing the passage of legislation much easily, due to a writed policy good standly the party restring in the government easily agreeing on legislation to pass. China's legislative branch for instance, largely outs as a robber stamp assistant of assiens taken by charmon to Jinping. b) A multi-party system is characterized by mitigle parties comparing for power in the government. This is vally as-156 in B legislative gridlock due to disagreements between parties. comparing for power in a country will impact the number of parties able to participate of fewirds in government. While a proportional representation system may allow for who try parties to earn some representation, a first past the post system, likely the UK, resultain two parties dominating due to smaller parties today Greed into voting for larger ones, less they throw away the vote. d) A region change would means a change in ideology transition biffer to the original region, meaning the past system can policy englering by making the passage of legislation much easier; Live To a writed policy good standly The party resulting in the government easily agreeing an legislation to pass. China's legislative brough, for instances largely outs as a robbe strong assisted of actions taken by chalman to Jinping. b) A multi-good system is charactized by multiple parties comparing for power in the government. This wouldy as It's in B legislation gridlock duto disagreements between parties. c) the electoral system in a country will impact the number of parties able to participate of fewinds in government. While a proportional representation of system may allow for minority parties to earn some representation, a first pass the post system, likelinthe Why results in two parties dominating for to smaller parties being forced into voting for large ones, less they throw away the vote. d) A regime change vivally means a change in ideology brownish different to the original regime, meaning the pasy states can due to a critical policy goal storada The party restring in the government easily agreeing an legislation to pass. China's legislative brough for instances largely at a as a robber storage assistant of actions taken by charmon to Jinping. b) A multi-party system is characterized by multiple parties comparing for power in the government. This usually as It is in B legislative gridlack due to disagreements between parties. c) The electoral system in a country will impact the number of parties able to participate of feetings in government. While a proportional representations of first pass the post system, likely the to earn some representations of first pass. The post system, likely the UK, results in two parties dominating due to smaller parties though forced into voting for larger ones, less they throw away the vote. d) A regime change usually means a change in ideology departed. differe to the original regime, meaning the pasy styrtem can	policy making by making the passage of legislation much easing government easily agreeing on legislation to pass. Chinas legislative branch, for instance, largely auts as a robber stamp and for of actions taken by chalman hi Jinping. b) A multi-party system is characterized by miliple parties conjuring for power in the government. This soully as Its in so legislation gridlack duto disagreements between parties. conjuring for power in the government this may allow the number of parties able to participate of fewirds in government. While a proportional representation system may allow for minority parties to earn some representation, a first pass the post system, likely the earn some representation, a first pass the post system, likely the earn some representation, a first pass the post system, likely the earn some representations, a first pass the post system, likely the earn some representations, a first pass the post system, likely the earn some representations, less they throw away this vote. d) A regime change usually means a change in idealogy drawnish. differe to the original regime, meaning the pasy statem can	Le To a crifical policy good stored by The party resulting in the bronch, for instance, lorgely outs as a robber stong and for of outsides by Miliper parties. b) A milti-good system is characterized by miltiple parties comparing for power in Pur government. This worldy as 16 in Blegislotive gridlock duto disogramus between parties. c) The electoral system in a country will impact the number of parties able to participate of feverily in government. While a proportional representation system may allow for winding parties to earn some representation, a first pass the post system, likeling UK, results in two parties dominating for to smaller parties town forced into voting for larger ones, less they throw away the vote. d) A regime change would make a change in idealogy brastically different to the original regime, making the pasty stystem can	government easily agreeing on legislation to pass. Chinas legislative
b) A miltigary system is characterized by mitiple parties comparing for power in Pu government. Pir smally as 15 in Blegislation gridlack duto disagreements between parties. Othe electoral system in a country will impact the number of parties able to participate of Feority in government. Will a proportional representation of system may allow for ministry parties to earn some representation, a first past the post system, likeling UK, results in two parties dominating for To smaller parties being forced into voting for larger ones, less they throw away the vote, d) A regime change visually means a change in ideology brassically different to the original regime, meaning the past system can	branch for instances lorgely outs as a robber stamp and of of
b) A miltigary system is characterized by mitiple parties comparing for power in the government. This usually as 156 in & legislation gridlack duto disagreements between parties. Othe electoral system in a country will impact the number of parties able to participate of fewinds in government. While a proportional representation system may allow for minority parties to earn some representation, a first pass the post system, likelinthe UK, results in two parties dominating due to smaller parties being forced into voting for larger ones, less they throw away the vote, all fred into voting for larger ones, less they throw away the vote, and A regime change would means a change in ideology browned the fewer to the original regime, meaning the past stystem can Composing for power in Pu government Wil smally as 15 in Blegislotin gridlock duto disogramus between parties. Or electoral system in a country will impact Tunumber of parties able to participate effectives in government. Will a proportional representation system may allow for winsity parties to earn some representation, a first pass The post system, likelithe UK, results in two parties dominating but to smaller parties towns Could into voting for larger ones, less they throw away the vote. d) A regime change usually means a change in ideology brastically different to the original regime, meaning the pasy stystem can De ectoral system in a country will impact the number of parties able to participate of fewirds in governmet. While a proportional representation system may allow for minority parties to earn some representation, a first pass the post system, likelistic UK, results in two parties dominating for to smaller parties towns forced into voting for larger ones, less they throw away this vote, all A regime change usually means a change in ideology drawically different to the original regime, meaning the pasy styrous can	comporing for power in Regovernment. Ris usually asults in
of parties able to participate of Fevirely in government. While a proportional representation system may allow for winority parties to earn some representation, a first past the post system, likelistle UK, results in two parties dominating for To smaller parties their follows forced into voting for larger ones, less they throw away the vote. a) A regime change usually means a change in iteology brasilally biffer to The original regime, meaning the pasy statem can	& legislation gridlock duto disagreements between parties.
of parties able to participate of Fevirely in government. While a proportional representation system may allow for winority parties to earn some representation, a first pass the post system, likely the UK, results in two parties dominating for To smaller parties towns forced into voting for larger ones, less they throw away the vote. of A regime change usually means a change in ideology brastically biffer to the original regime, maning the pasy stystem can proportional representation system may allow for winority paries to earn some representation, a first past the post system, likely the UK, results in two parties dominating for To smaller parties thing forced into voting for larger ones, less they throw away the vote. a) A regime change usually means a change in ideology brastically biffer to the original regime, making the pasy stystem can to earn some representation, a first pass the post system, like in the UK, results in two parties dominating on To smaller parties thing forced into voting for larger ones, less they throw away the vote. a) A regime change usually means a change in idealogy brassically biffer to The original regime, meaning the pasy stystem can OK, results in two parties dominating for to smaller parties being forced into voting for larger ones, less they throw away the vote. a) A regime change usually means a change in ideology brastically biffer to the original regime, meaning the pasy stystem can	to earn some representation, a first past the post system, likelythe
Siffer To The original regime, meaning The pasy stystem can	UK, result in two parties dominating on To smaller parties Toung
d) A regime change usual generals a change in idealogy brassically differe to the original regime, meaning the pasy stassers can	forced into voting for larger ones, less they throw away this vote.
differe to the original regime, maing the pary statem can easily change. For instancy an authoritarian takeour usually will Unauthorized copying or reuse of any part of this page is illegal.

ADDITIONAL ANSWER FACE FOR QUESTION 0 Lead to a single party systems, where other parties are silenced or bonne to allow the dominat party to more officers by change polices. Manually a Transition to democrary would most likely lead to a multiple party Bystem, where differ ideas con compete in elections to determine the willettu people.

- 6. There are different types of party systems around the world.
 - (a) Describe one type of party system. Explain one way that type of party system influences policy making.
 - (b) Describe another type of party system. Explain one way that type of party system influences policy making.
 - (c) Explain how a country's party system is influenced by the type of electoral system in the country.
 - (d) Explain how regime change can lead to a change in the type of party system in a country.

a) multiparty system this party can make policy making more difficult in that multiple positions and oppinguing Die being heard and accounted by so when one party avernot agree it can move possing regimention or While ever is happening very difficulty 1 10 800 f
b) one party dominance. One party dominance means one parry nous control so their policies have an that was agree or are even being accounted to, since There is only one party in charge it is their decision.
c's a country's party system can ourrenance be influenced by the electoral system by whether or not the beable can note memory and it they can muso THEY note for It a done in wear par & one bound stream the party is going to be alone to control what the voters See. HAR If the country votes porpornangly or by area then their opinions as more timely to be represented

Unauthorized copying or reuse of any part of this page is illegal.

IN the nortanal seascate like in Birtham where the people vote bether representative to paralliament but IN russia where it is one-party dominanthe people have less representation and awareness to vote differently al) a regime change can lead to a Change in the party system because the quiernment is changing overan, when the government is transitioning from one regime to another, new customs may be putin place such as nopresonounced proportional representation where areas will be able to VUTE FOR A VEDRESONATIVE WHO WILL SMALL FRENT
beliers and controls. Or, a regime changean Change the parry system making it less democratic Which could mean a one party dominance System where not all amone represented and arose to participate manyagementantantantantantantantantantantantantan want or need can be acknowledged.

- 6. There are different types of party systems around the world.
 - (a) Describe one type of party system. Explain one way that type of party system influences policy making.
 - (b) Describe another type of party system. Explain one way that type of party system influences policy making.
 - (c) Explain how a country's party system is influenced by the type of electoral system in the country.
 - (d) Explain how regime change can lead to a change in the type of party system in a country.

a) I type of party system is the two party system.
This leads to a lot of juision in ideology in policy making, making it harder to pass laws.
b) Another type of party system is the multiparty system. This can lead to partles Forming alliances when making policies.
c) Proportional Representation leads to multiparty systems, while single-member districts lead to two party systems
2) A regime could change the electoral system of a country, leading to a new party system

Unauthorized copying or reuse of any part of this page is illegal.

AP® COMPARATIVE GOVERNMENT AND POLITICS 2019 SCORING COMMENTARY

Question 6

Note: Student samples are quoted verbatim and may contain spelling and grammatical errors.

Overview

The intent of this question was to assess students' understanding of party systems and electoral systems, as well as the relationships of those two types of systems with policy making and regime change. The skills tested were descriptive and explanatory. Students had six specific tasks: to describe two different types of party systems, to explain the effect of each of those party system types on policy making, to explain how an electoral system influences a party system, and to explain how regime change influences party systems.

Sample: 6A Score: 6

In part (a) the response earned 1 point for describing that a "single party system is a system in which there is one sole party which is dominant in the country." Additional acceptable responses include descriptions of a dominant-party system, a two-party system, or a multiparty system.

In part (a) the response earned 1 point for explaining that a single-party system makes "the passage of legislation much easier, due to a unified policy goal shared by the party resulting in the government easily agreeing on legislation to pass." Additional acceptable responses include that policies are created to keep the party in power and that policies only reflect the views of the governing party.

In part (b) the response earned 1 point for describing that "[a] multiparty system is characterized by multiple parties competing for power in the government." Additional acceptable responses could describe a dominant-party system, a single-party system, or a two-party system.

In part (b) the response earned 1 point for explaining that a multiparty system "usually results in legislative gridlock due to disagreements between parties." Additional acceptable responses include that multiparty systems integrate multiple viewpoints in the policy process, which requires negotiation and compromise, and they give voice to minority, ethnic, or regionalist parties in the policy process.

In part (c) the response earned 1 point for explaining that, in a first-past-the-post system, "a first past the post system, like in the UK, results in two parties dominating due to smaller party supporters being forced into voting for larger ones less they throw away their vote." An additional acceptable response is that in a proportional representation system, more parties are able to gain seats because the percentage of votes roughly translates into the percentage of seats.

In part (d) the response earned 1 point for explaining that "an authoritarian takeover usually will lead to a single party systems, where other parties are silenced or banned" and "a transition to democracy would most likely lead to a multiple party system, where different ideas can compete in elections to determine the will of the people." An additional acceptable response is that transitions from democracies to authoritarian regimes can lead to the banning of opposition parties and a single-party system.

Sample: 6B Score: 3

In part (a) the response did not earn a point for a description. The response "Multiparty system" is the correct identifier, but it does not offer a description of that system. An acceptable response could describe a dominant-party system, a two-party system, or a multiparty system.

AP® COMPARATIVE GOVERNMENT AND POLITICS 2019 SCORING COMMENTARY

Question 6 (continued)

In part (a) the response earned 1 point for explaining that multiparty systems "can make policy making more difficult in that multiple positions and oppinions are being heard and accounted for so when one party does not agree it can make passing legislation or what ever is happening very difficult." Additional acceptable responses include that the integration of multiple voices into the policy process requires compromise and negotiation and that multiparty systems give voice to minority, ethnic, or regionalist parties in the process.

In part (b) the response earned 1 point for describing a dominant-party system as one in which "one party has control" and "there is only one party in charge." Additional acceptable responses could describe a single-party system, a two-party system, or a multiparty system.

In part (b) the response earned 1 point for explaining that, in a dominant-party system, "policies have an easier time passing ... since there is only one party in charge it is their decision." Additional acceptable responses include that policies only reflect the views of the governing party and that policies are designed to keep the governing party in power.

In part (c) the response did not earn a point for the explanation "if the country votes proportionately or by area then their opinions as more likely to be represented in the national scale." This does not address how an electoral system influences a party system. An acceptable response is that in a proportional representation system, more parties are able to gain seats because the percentage of votes roughly translates into the percentage of seats.

In part (d) the response did not earn a point for the explanation "a regime chang can change the party system making it less democratic which could mean a one-party dominance system where not all citizens are represented and able to participate." This does not address the effects on party systems clearly enough. An acceptable response is that transitions from democracies to authoritarian regimes can lead to the banning of opposition parties and a single-party system.

Sample: 6C Score: 1

In part (a) the response did not earn a point for a description. The response "two party system" is the correct identifier, but it does not offer a description of that system. An acceptable response would be a description of a dominant-party system, a two-party system, or a multiparty system.

In part (a) the response earned 1 point for explaining that a two-party system "leads to a lot of division in ideology in policy making, making it harder to pass laws." Additional acceptable responses include that the integration of multiple voices into the policy process requires compromise and negotiation and that two-party systems encourage centrist parties.

In part (b) the response did not earn a point for a description. The response "multiparty system" is the correct identifier, but the response does not offer a description of that system. Acceptable responses include that the integration of multiple voices into the policy process requires compromise and negotiation and that multiparty systems give voice to minority, ethnic, or regionalist parties in the process.

In part (b) the response did not earn a point for the explanation that a multiparty system "can lead to parties Forming alliances when making policies" because this does not describe how a party system influences policy making. An acceptable response is that policies only reflect the views of the governing party or policies are designed to keep the governing party in power.

AP® COMPARATIVE GOVERNMENT AND POLITICS 2019 SCORING COMMENTARY

Question 6 (continued)

In part (c) the response did not earn the point. The explanation that proportional representation systems "leads to multiparty systems, while single-member districts lead to two party systems" does not address how an electoral system influences a party system. An acceptable response is that in a proportional representation system, more parties are able to gain seats because the percentage of votes roughly translates into the percentage of seats.

In part (d) the response did not earn the point. The explanation that "[a] regime could change the electoral system of a country, leading to a new party system" is too vague and does not explain how a regime change influences a party system. An acceptable response is that transitions from democracies to authoritarian regimes can lead to the banning of opposition parties and a single-party system.